Compiled by Our Stati From Disputches PRETORIA — The government of the Netherlands has formally protested to South Africa over the recapture of a Dutch citizen by armed South African police at the Dutch Embassy in Pretoria, the embassy said Thursday,

The South African government acknowledged that an incident took place Tuesday but said that there were "conflicting accounts of what exactly happened" and de-fended the police action as consis-tent with international law.

The Netherlands said three South African policemen had entered the embassy in violation of principles of diplomatic immunity to recapture Klaas de Jonge, who was trying to escape from their custody. He has been held without charges since June 23 under South Africa's Internal Security Act, which allows indefinite detention without trial.

The South African foreign minister. R.F. Botha, said Thursday that Mr. de Jong was suspected of help-ing set up arms caches for the African National Congress, which is banned in South Africa and is pledged to overthrow white-minor-

Russian Asserts Arms-Cut Offer Means Warheads

By Leslie H. Gelb New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - A senior Soviet general has told a U.S. legis-lator that Moscow's offer to reduce strategic nuclear forces by 25 percent or more applies to missile warheads as well as to missiles. The significance of such an offer is that a reduction in missiles alone could leave each side free to increase its warheads by adding more warheads to each permitted missile.

Representative Stephen J. Solarz, a Democrat of New York, said Wednesday that this position was stated to him and an aide in Moscow on July 3 by Colonel General Nikolai F. Chervov, the head of arms control for the Soviet general

The statement to Mr. Solarz was the first indication that the propos-al made by Mikhail S. Gorbachev. the Soviet leader, two months ago was intended to cover reductions not just in missiles but also in war-

Administration officials said Wednesday that nothing of the kind had been conveyed officially by the Soviet side. They said that the Soviet Union had yet to make a formal presentation in Geneva of Mr. Gorbachev's offer for a 25-percent reduction in nuclear forces. The officials added that since President Ronald Reagan had also been calling for reductions in warheads and missiles, such a Soviet proposal would be a step forward. Mr. Solarz also said that General Chervov took a more flexible line than the official Soviet position on inspections to enforce a ban on chemical weapons and on allowing research on a space-based missile defense system, which the Reagan administration calls the Strategic Desense Initiative.

U.S. Woman Confined 42 Years Gets $235,000

STAMFORD. Connecticut - Gladys Burr never knew why she had been committed, and she never knew why she had been

Miss Burr was committed in January 1936. when she was 29 and living with her family in Connecticut. She was first diagnosed as psychotic and then declared mentally retarded.

For 42 years she remained in the custody of the state, at the Mansfield Training School for the retarded and in a succession of statecontrolled boarding homes.

Several times she wrote neatly penned letters, according to her attorney, to state offi-cials asking for freedom. "I am not happy here," one letter said in the 1940s, "and don't get along too well with the kids here." Sometimes, she charges, she was beaten and subjected to other cruelty.

In 1979 her lawyer, Richard Altschuler, filed a suit against a group of state mental-health officials asking $125 million and con-tending that they had deprived her of her civil rights and had subjected her to slavery.

"It was obvious they forgot about her," Mr. Altschuler said. "You can't give back those 42 years. She could have married, had Under the settlement, approved by Chief Judge T. Emmet Clairie of federal district court in Hartford, the state will pay Miss Burr $160,000 and will waive $75,000 in medical costs incurred for the treatment of a broken hip that she suffered in 1983. Most of the officials responsible for Miss Burn's confinement have died or retired.

None was in court Wednesday. Miss Burr was first committed on the recommendation of her mother and her family doctor, a cousin. That could not happen today, state officials say, because involuntary commitment would have to be approved by the probate court. In the years that followed, a succession of mental tests, some now outdated, gave contradictory results.

State officials say Miss Burr had never made it clear before 1968 that she wanted to leave. "She only asked to get out once, and but she changed her mind the next day." said Francis MacGregor, an assistant attorney general, who represented the officials.

"None of the defendants had actual knowledge that she wanted to get out," Mr. Mac-Gregor said. But Mr. Altschuler said she made requests in at least three letters during the 1940s. "I don't want to live if things don't change for me," she wrote in one, her attorney said. Please let me know."

For Miss Burr, four decades of confinement began in January 1936, when she was committed to Norwich Hospital. Tests at the hospital indicated that she was psychotic and mildly retarded, with an intelligence quotient of 57. Little note was taken of the fact that she had completed two years of high school and a three-month business course.

Six months later, doctors at Norwich pronounced her cured and said her IQ was 82. But on July 10, 1936, Miss Burr was transferred to the Mansfield Training School, a residential center for the mentally retarded in Mansfield Depot.

At Mansfield, she scored 20 points higher on IQ tests —a rare occurrence. Tested every five years from 1946 to 1961, her scores ranged from 99 to 104.

Suicide car-bombings Tuesday that killed 17 persons in south Lebanon, coming on the heels of the Trans World Airlines hijacking, can be expected to sharpen that debate even further.

Israeli analysts say it will probably give even more ammunition to those Israeli defense officials, now in the majority, who argue that it is impossible to work out a deal with the Shiites of south Lebanon to keep the area quiet.

This conclusion is probably just what the Beirut Shiite hijackers, as well as those who planned Tuesday's suicide attacks, wanted to achieve, especially since it ap-peared in the past few months that the more-moderate Shiite Amal militia and Israel were heading for an understanding on keeping south

Lebanon peaceful. The result, Israeli sources say, is that Israel now appears destined to throw its full weight behind the Christian-led South Lebanon Army to maintain the security zone, even though this probably means a constant source of conflict with both the Amal militia and its arch rival. the pro-Iranian Hezbal-lah, or Party of God, both of which majority of those Shiites, it is im-

Argentina Spurns British Trade Offer

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The government declined Wednesday to respond in kind to the lifting of trade restrictions by Britain and reiterated its demand for talks on sovereignty over the disputed Falkland

In a communique issued by the Foreign Ministry, however, Argenting said for the first time that it was prepared to declare a formal end to hostilities with Britain if the British government agreed to talks. The communique invited the British government to negotiations within 60 days on restoring relations. It said the talks could be held through the United Nations or mutually friendly nations but would have to include the Falklands issue.

Britain announced on Monday that it was lifting a ban on Argentine imports as a good faith measure and said that it hoped Argentina would respond by eliminating similar restrictions. It maintained, however, that the sovereignty question was not open to debate.

Army Urged to Cut Back Robot Diverted From Cable Job to Find Recorders By Dropping Plans for sts in Kuwait thursday at separate seding and injured nine, the king 5 Divisions, Officials Say

> By George C. Wilson Washington Post Service
> WASHINGTON — An internal cancel its prized plan for five lightinfantry divisions in order to help cut the military budget, Pentagon

Leaders in each branch of the defenses as they are forced to cut back plans they developed when President Ronald Reagan's military buildup had overwhelming polincal support.

We've dug in our heels, and we're going to win," one army lead-er said Wednesday after noting that the light divisions - four acfive and one reserve - had been recommended for axing by the Pentagon's manpower office, headed by Lawrence J. Korb.

General John A. Wickham Jr., the army chief of stall, has personally championed the light divisions. Whether to forgo spending mil-tions of dollars to build facilities for light divisions composed of people already in uniform is one of many issues to be thrashed out soon within the Pentagon and in Congress as the budget for fiscal 1986 is revised in light of congressonal cuts and as the new five-year military plan is designed.

The Defense Resources Board, composed of civilian and military leaders in the Pentagon, is expected to address the future of light divi-sions in a budget meeting late this month. Neither Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger nor the deputy defense secretary, William H. Taft 4th, has addressed the proposal to forgo the divisions, Pentagon

Although it is too early to know precisely how much money the Pentagon could lose through congressional budget cuts, one internal projection puts the potential loss at $250 billion for fiscal years 1986 through 1990 and $300 billion through fiscal 1991. This year, Mr. Reagan sought a hard to protect them. hard to protect them.

The army has estimated that it would cost $395 million to put a light division in Alaska, the home state of Ted Stevens, a Republican interview that two identical Scars. who is chairman of the Senate apals were available at the crash site propriations subcommittee on dein the North Atlantic to continue tense, and $1.2 billion for one at the search for debris that could Fort Drum, New York, home help investigators determine ground of Samuel S. Stratton, a whether the plane, in which all 329 Democrat and a senior member of people aboard were killed, was dethe House Armed Services Com- stroyed by a bomb.

Army officials say, however, that much of that money would have to be spent even if the light divisions were not formed, because of needed improvements at both sites.
That would lower the net cost to about $70 million in operational costs for Alaska and about $400 million for Fort Drum, they said.

The two other active light divi-sions would use existing facilities at Fort Ord, California, and in Hawaii, while the reserve division would be at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, also an existing complex.

Besides the cost issue, some military professionals have questioned the value of light divisions pitted against heavily armored Soviet forces. General Wickham and his allies contend that a 10,000-member light division's mobility and firepower, compared with the 16,000 troops in a regular division, make it ideal in confronting threats in distant trouble spots.

Budget cutbacks will force the other services to forgo new pro-6-percent increase in his fiscal-1986 grams and stretch out or cancel military budget, but the Senate has existing ones. Some Pentagon execexisting ones. Some Pentagon exec-utives struggling with ways to make big savings said that the navy's new shipbuilding budget might have to be trimmed and that the future of the air force's Stealth bomber might be readdressed.

was little doubt that the Scarab could withstand the pressures of 6,700 feet, where the plane wreckage lay.

The Scarab that recovered the recorders was operated from a control room on its mother vessel. Léon Thèvenin, a French cable ship. A 10,000-foot umbilical cable linked the two, carrying electrical power and commands to Scarab and feeding data and television signals back to the ship. According to a description of Scarab operations published in the September 1981 issue of Bell Laboratories Record, three people monitor and control Scarab's every move. One person operates the propulsion controls, firing electrical and hydraulic thrusters to maneuver the craft. Another operates the craft's television cameras and jointed mechanical arms. A third person tends the craft's small computer. In this manner, one of the craft last week began searching a corri-dor 10 miles by one mile where investigators believed the plane wreckage would be. For several days, Mr. Barrett said. Scarab's sonar "ear" failed to pick up any of the pinging signals that should have been emanating from the plane's two flight data and voice recorders.

Only after engineers made a fine ljustment in the sonar, permitting it to detect signals at a slightly higher frequency, did the robot be-gin hearing signals. Then it moved in closer and saw the recorder with its television eyes.

A Wishful Framework

President Reagan's "framework" budget deal with Speaker Tip O'Neill is a flight from reality. The simultaneous news that Budget Director David Stockman is leaving makes the outlook for deficit reduction even bleaker. The deficit crisis - and it is nothing less - is being blithely ignored, and the man who knows most about budget truths and consequences will no longer be around to goad us all.

There are only three ways to bring down deficits of $200 billion because only three budget elements can yield enough revenue to close such a gap. The realistic options are: Cut back defense, reduce some Social Security benefits or raise taxes. The practical choice would be some of each. Mr. Reagan's deal with Mr. O'Neill opts for the least effective combination: the most modest defense cutback, nothing from Social Security, no tax increase.

Being negotiated are differences between the Senate and House budget resolutions, each of which would supposedly reduce next year's prospective deficit by $56 billion and save $300 billion over three years. The Senate favored cuts in Social Security, the House deeper cuts in defense. To break the impasse, Mr. Reagan let Mr. O'Neill stand as the protector of Social Security and had his way on defense. Since he vows to veto any tax increase, that unpleasant topic continues to be ignored.

A very bad situation is thus made worse. Mr. Stockman and other analysts found even the originally promised savings exaggerated. Instead of settling for lesser cuts, President Reagan and Speaker O'Neill should have wanted more. Their compromise suggests that neither the administration nor the Democrats care enough about deficits. And without Mr. Stockman to keep them honest, both parties will indulge their worst pretenses.

The budget director has earned a rest and a high Wall Street salary. But his mastery of the budget will not be easily replaced. The apparent collapse of resolve to slash the deficit leaves his successor an even bigger headache. The continuing $200-billion deficits are the product of exuberant tax-cutting in 1981 and indulgence of Mr. Reagan's inflated military buildup. Even within those parameters, Mr. Stockman has done the best he could - sometimes too well - to find savings in nondefense programs. Above all, he has dared to defy the president by sounding the alarm about Pentagon spending and by warning of the inevitability of tax increases.

That Mr. Stockman's candor about budgets and deficits came to be regarded as heroic is the sorriest possible comment about the public servants he leaves behind.

Disarmament Shot Down

Let's hear it for the Gross National Arsenal and to hell with the pleadings of thousands of America's top law enforcement officials and the recommendation of a Reagan administra-tion task force on crime. The U.S. Senate has voted to gut what minimal protections have existed against interstate and quickie sales of handguns. The senators swallowed the arm-America philosophy of the National Rifle As-sociation. The result is a dangerous bill that deserves prompt burial in the House.

Why all this support for abetting what is already the worst record of any country in the world for annual handgun deaths? One big line of the gun lobby is that present attempts to maintain and approve minimal public safety protections — such as a 14-day waiting period for handgun purchases — are too much of a nuisance for dealers, sportsmen and others with legitimate interests in prompt trans-actions. But the proposals would have applied only to handguns and would have addressed other paperwork concerns by lifting controls from rifles and other long guns.

Another excuse given for stripping away safety protections is that criminals can always find handguns anyway. This neatly ignores efforts to stop quick sales to mentally de-ranged impulse buyers and killers and to criminals in a hurry, who now won't even have to go to a black market. Any corner store will do. There is also an NRA favorite myth that goes something like this: If you let the government do anything serious about monitoring the flow of handguns, then Uncle Sam will make a great big inventory of who has any-thing around that fires. Dictators then can seize every weapon from under every rooftop and take over the country in no time flat. Some people actually seem to believe that.

The majority of Americans apparently do not buy that line. In response to polls over the years, they have supported more, not fewer, controls on handguns. Until similar reason reaches the Senate, law enforcement officials and the rest of us will have to hope that good sense prevails in the House.

The Times later became an institution, as

The Times at Its Palaces

The Times was celebrating its 200th anni-wersary last night at Hampton Court palace in Richmond. That's our cousin, The Times of London, a newspaper that won its independence under George III and has been a pillar of English public life ever since. Its history is the history of the newspaper, and we owe it much, even - since it invented both the editorial and the editorial "we" - our voice.

Newspapers before and since have been means for governments to influence people. Under its great editors, The Times became a way for people to influence government. It created public opinion.

"What you read in the morning in The Times, you shall hear in the evening in all society," noted a visitor to England, Ralph Waldo Emerson. During Britain's Crimean War against the Russians the paper roused the nation with descriptions of the neglect of troops and mismanagement of campaigns. Florence Nightingale was dispatched, and the government resigned. "If England is ever to be England again," fumed Lord John Russell, a former Prime Minister, "this vile tyranny of The Times must be cut off."

solidly established as the House of Lords or the Church of England. "It even regarded the monarchy as not much above it in importance and authority," writes Henry Fairlie, a former editorial writer. Its editors neglected its role as a newspaper, believing they were writing for the governing elite instead of a wider readership. Circulation steadily shrank, and the Thunderer had to be rescued from whimpering into bankruptcy, first by Roy Thomson, the Canadian newspaper magnate, and then by Rupert Murdoch, its present owner. Mr. Murdoch lost his first editor, the distinguished Harold Evans, but has gained circulation.
A glittering list of dignitaries were invited to Hampton Court palace to celebrate The Times's bicentenary. Reporters of The Times, who were not invited, were holding their own celebration in a working-class London bar called the Hampton Court Palace. They invited a rival list of dignitaries.

The Times's present times may be turbulent but it has survived worse. England would have been worse if governed without its tyranny. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Interest Rates Boost Sterling

The pound's value against the dollar has risen by over a quarter since its February low tide. This represents a welcome correction of the gross overvaluation of the American currency, now suffering a succession of blows ranging from economic recession to the valedictory warnings of President Reagan's resigning budget director. But sterling has also risen 15 percent, since February, against the currency of our main European competitor. It has reached levels against the German mark as high as we have seen since 1982. The pound has been boosted by [high] interest rates. We are losing competitiveness in the biggest European market dangerously fast.

Party Realignment in Britain?

British political experts believe that the public is turning against the prime minister's tough economic policies and the prospect of continu-ing high unemployment. If the trend continues, the most likely result of a general election would be a hung Parliament - with Labor holding the most seats but short of a majority, and a strengthened Alliance holding the balance of power. For the United States and Britain's other allies, this would be an unsettling development, although preferable to a Labor government with a clear majority. The Alliance is in fundamental support of the Atlantic alliance and a responsible British role in Europe. The same cannot be said of Labor.

It is understood that Mr. Hull repeated to Signor Rosso virtually the same sentiments that he expressed in his recent note to Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, to the effect that the two countries should again refer their dispute to the League of Nations. A Bipartisan Plan to Get Rid of the Budget Deficit among the impostors. But as House and Senate conferees resume work week on the budget, the real McCoy is on the table.

WASHINGTON - Budgets W come in so many disguises that it is hard to find the real McCoy

Our budget plan is supported by three Republicans and three Democrats, a majority of the Senate conferees. It gets the job done with hammer and nails, not smoke and mirrors. By fiscal 1988, if it is passed, the deficit will be down to $71.9 billion: By fiscal 1990 the deficit will be gone We will not have to come back next year for further "adjustments." This plan hits the deficit in each of its four pressure points.

It cuts federal spending. Revenue sharing ends after 1986. Medicare savings total more than $18 billion in three years, with no extra burden to beneficiaries. Agriculture cuts reach $12 billion by 1988. Do-mestic savings will total $117 billion. Military spending is frozen in 1986 but allowed to grow by 3 per-cent in 1987 and 1988. America has bought itself a powerhouse defense, and it is on delivery. Under the plan now before the conferees, it will still buy $300 billion worth of protection in each of the next three years.

· Cost of living adjustments for Social Security and other retirement programs are suspended for one year. A 20-percent plowback of savings

WASHINGTON — Judging from the polls, there are increasing doubts that President

Ronald Reagan has the toughness that effective leadership requires in these times.

As terrorist incidents in Lebanon and El Salvador slip into the history books, conservatives are questioning what happened to Mr. Reagan's 1981 promise of "swift and effective retribution" for attacks on American citizens.

The sad truth is that hundreds of American lives have been taken by terrorists in the last five years, and no one has been punished. After picking up a cheap win on Grenada in 1983 and lobbing a few naval shells into Lebanon in 1984 to cover the withdrawal of the marines from that misguided deployment, Mr. Reagan has appar-

Now the conservative Heritage Foundation, a source of people and ideas for the Reagan administration, has raised the embarrassing question of Mr. Reagan's unilateral disarmament in domestic politics. It asks how deficits have reached record levels under him without his systematic use of one of the great constitutional powers any president enjoys: the veto. In a policy paper last week, James Gattuso and put the issue in two succinct paragraphs:

Stephen Moore of the Heritage Foundation staff

"Seldom has a president adopted a tougher will protect the low-income elderly. Full adjustments will resume in 1987. Between 1986 and 1988 the plan calls for $59 billion in new revenues. None will be used to fund new spending programs. Instead they will all be used to reduce the federal deficit. The plan can be passed. And here what makes it necessary. It rests on one, blunt assumption: Unless we use all the budget tools available, we will have $200-billion deficits indefinitely. Budget Director David Stockman told the New York Stock Exchange that last month. By 1990 the interest on the national debt will nearly equal what we now spend on national defense. Our foreign trade deficit will be running neck and neck with the federal deficit.

From the long list of negatives, select any one — from high interest rates to lost jobs — and the conclusion is the same. We either reverse the deficit trend this time, or it will never be reversed. This is the last chance to act while we still have some measure of control. And this is the one chance we have between last year's election and next year's election to deal with economic facts as we find them rather than as we wish they were. Ever since the budget conference began, it has been marked by politi-cal suspicion. When sessions were suspended on June 25 it was because neither house would move from the corner into which it had painted itself. Conferees were seen as either anti-defense or against Social Security, depending on whether they sup-ported the House or the Senate budget. As long as those remain the only two choices, the suspicion and deadlock will continue. The budgets separately approved in the House and in the Senate each put two of the three deficit-reduction elements off limits. The house ex-empted revenues and Social Security. The Senate protected revenues and the military. The only way the deficit can really be eliminated is if all the big-ticket items are part of a fair package. What is needed now is a decisive step to demonstrate that no one is getting the upper hand at the expense of someone else. The question is whether the administration will go along with the Sen-ate's budget offer. Precedent suggests that the White House could check in at the "last resort" without embarrassment. It has happened before.

Twice President Reagan has made tax increases possible when the economic facts made them essential. The White House and members of both parties in both Houses are still skittish about asking for more revenues, but when it was clear in the past that everything short of revenues simply would not keep the deficit from climbing we did what was necessary.

The same situation exists now. We cannot cure the deficit with spending cuts alone. We cannot grow our way out of the problem while annual interest on the national debt chews up the growth and then some. And we will not be able to do anything at all unless the conference deadlock is broken with a bipartisan agreement. Our budget alternative gives the president nearly everything he asked in spending cuts. It leaves the military buildup intact, while unifying both the public and the private sectors in the most serious effort ever made to cut federal deficits. We represent a majority of Republican and Democratic conferees from the Senate who have been working for a month, trying to negotiate deli-cit reduction within narrow bounds. It has not worked. We have become done completely can move the con-ference and Congress. It is time for cal sins, and all prevalent, but not at Republicans and Democrats, repre-the heart of the problem. tatives, senators and the president to face the economic facts and act.

The Washington Post.

The examples it cites range from farm subsidies to education and grant-in-aid programs. Cumu-latively they explain part of the climb in federal spending above the levels Mr. Reagan sought.

The Heritage authors do not admit that much of the deficit they deplore results from the tax reductions Mr. Reagan pushed through at the start of his presidency. Nor do they examine the point made by congressional Democrats: that Congress has rearranged spending priorities but not increased overall appropriations beyond budgeted levels. Still, the thrust of their criticism is valid. In domestic policy as much as in foreign affairs. Mr. Reason has tended to buff and outfit.

The System Is Overdue For a Purge

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — A quiet con-W volution is going on in the So-viet Union. No show trials with public "confessions": no Zis liniousines streaking across Red Square at midnight: no Khrushchevesque secret denunciations or exile of latter-day Trotskys. The coils of change twist in an undramatic way to produce a remarkably unremarked purge.

Andrei Gromyko has been eased upstairs to a ceremonial post, his place at the head of foreign policy iaken not by Anatoli Dobrynin but by an unknown Georgian party boss. That cannot be explained as the replacement of the gerontocracy by a new generation of Russian leaders.

Grigori Romanov, fired last week, was not one of the Brezhnev-Cher-nenko old guard. Like Mikhail Gorbachev, he was one of the new crop put onto the fast track by the enforcer of change, Yuri Andropov, Mr. Gor-bachev has forced Mr. Romanov out for the oldest of reasons: The new man at the top did not want his chief rival looking over his shoulder. Nor was Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov an old fogy. When he tried to redirect money from land forces into hightechnology weaponry last year, a combination of old soldiers and party stalwarts forced him out as chief of staff. Now Marshal Ogarkov's new book, "History Teaches Vigilance," is officially noticed. His return to the Defense Ministry would mean that those who opposed his strategy would be on the list for removal. This is no mere shake-up. A purge is under way, none the less systematic and far-reaching for being bloodless. Much more than the torch is being passed. This Moscow circus has three rings: (1) Among the "young" men, in their 50s and 60s, the human element of clashing ambitions is at work. (2) Among the competing institutions - the party, the military, the KGB — a power struggle is under way. (3) Most important, among the economic ideologies, a decision is be-ing made that will profoundly affect the way the Soviet Union is run. It is news to nobody that the Soviet system does not work. After nearly 70 years of communism it is hard to keep blaming the weather for a nation's inability to feed its people. The Andropovites now in charge at the Kremlin know that the ignoble ex-periment of central direction has failed, and that great chunks of the party apparat and its present leaders must follow yesterday's Mensheviks to history's ash heap.

Mr. Gorbachev cannot admit that. convinced that only a dramatic effort. He must blame the systemic failure that opens all doors and gets the job on lack of discipline, on drunkenness

> That problem was laid out for all to see in the "Novosibirsk paper," leaked by the Andropov-Gorbachev faction two years ago. What is needed is not mere decentralization, or mild reform toward market responsiveness, but a rooting out of "class groups" that have taken over in the theoretically classless society. Worst of these is the group that occupies "numerous cozy niches with ill-de-fined responsibilities" — the party bureaucrats who are the economy's most anti-productive middlemen.

> That heretical paper was written by Professor Tatyana Zaslavskaya, a full member of the Academy of Sciences, who promptly dropped out of sight. Now, in the Gorbachev ascendancy, she is back, haranguing colleagues in Novosibirsk and being respectfully interviewed in Izvestia.

WASHINGTON — June 25 came and went without much notice, even by the middle-aged males who constitute America's Korean War generation, and none of us made enough noise to disturb any-one's reverie. That is too bad. Although limited in its goals, Korea was, by any definition, a major war. In three years and one month nearly 34,000 Americans were killed in action or died in captivity, and more than 20,000 others died of noncombat causes. By comparison, about 56,000 Americans died in Vietnam. The North Korean and Chinese Communist forces suffered an estimated 1.6 million combat casualties, about 60 percent Chinese, plus another 400,000 deaths from disease. An estimated 3 million North Korean civilians and 500,000 South Korean civilians died as a result of the war.

WASHINGTON — The United States is expediting delivery of Sidewinder and Stinger missiles to Pakistan as part of its effort to bolster defenses there against Soviet and Afghan air incursions.

A State Department statement said Wednesday that "a number" of Sidewinders, air-to-air missiles previously on order for Pakistan's fleet of F-16 fighters, were being shipped, "as well as other appropriate air-defense equipment."

The statement said explicitly that the decision to expedite the shipment was made "in response to repeated violations of Pakistan's airspace and territory by Commu-nist aircraft operating from Af-ghanistan," and it called the missiles "an appropriate response" to by Mr. Kim earlier this year that the bill would be paid. It was not. The showcase approach is most evident in two Pyongyang institutions regularly shown to foreigners, the No. 1 Senior Middle School and the maternity hospital. Both display millions of dollars of equipment bought from the West, apparently with cash. The sense that both present an image of their society as institutions are exhibitions first and workplaces second is heightened by the unused look of much of the equipment, the quiet in the cor-

Thirty seconds after he entered, an attendant yanked him away to a compartment several doors down and closed the door, after which muffled voices and protests were heard for two hours.

As the week progresses, it becomes clear that no unsupervised contacts with the people will be tolerated. Making impromptu stops to take photographs in Pyongyang proves nearly impossible, and hotel waiters are summoned away the moment exchanges go beyond the menu.

The caution extends to arranging visits to institutions that are eerily quiet. Visits to Pyongyang's show-case No. 1 Senior Middle School are scheduled after most classes have ended for the day. At the maternity hospital, delivery rooms are deserted, many of the laborato-ries idle and corridors oddly devoid of activity, all at midmorning on a weekday.

ASEAN Sways Shultz on Cambodian Peace Talks

By Don Oberdorfer

Washington Post Service KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in a notable shift of view, expressed general U.S. backing Thursday for indirect talks on Cambodia as proposed by the non-Communist nations of Southeast

Mr. Shultz's remarks in a closed meeting, as reported by a senior aide, fell short of a definitive U.S. endorsement of the negotiating initiative. But the secretary of state's comments appeared far more sympathetic and tiative. But the secretary of state's pathetic, and much less critical, than statements he was making on the subject less than a week ago.

Foreign ministers of the Associa-tion of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) formally urged Vietnam on Monday to agree to indirect talks aimed a political settlement of the war in Cambodia. The proposed talks would be between the three groups of anti-Vietnamese Cambodian guerrillas, on the one hand, and a Vietnamese delegation including representatives of the Vietnamese-installed Cambodian government, on the other.

The two groups would talk to each other through an intermedi-

The "Street" is not alone in cultivating myths, fantasies dished out by "Effishs to the "Public". Other milieus caress irrational beliefs. After five hundred years, scholars are trying to modify the image of King Richard III, Shakespeare's villian. "Misshapen Dick", valiant crookback prodigy... indigested and deformed lump..... bottled spider" Richard's reign (two years and two months) was one of the shortest in England's history. His character, writes an historian, "was nowhere so complex as that of other English monarchs like the psychopathic Henry VIII, or the profligate Charles II. A Festival for and by Alwin Nikolais

by David Stevens

IX-EN-PROVENCE France - Alwin Nikolais, choreographer, designer, composer, lighting techni-cian, teacher and all-around theatrical magician, brought his genius for filling space to this sun-drenched city, where for the last two weeks he has been the focal point of Danse à Aix, the annual contemporary dance festival.

The idea of this year's festival was that it would be "with and around" Nikolais, who at 72 and with a flowing white mane now cuts a patriarchal figure without being any the less ebullient. Nikolais concocted a street entertainment, which is one of the features of the Aix festival, and the Nikolais Dance Theater came with two programs that in-chided a new work, "Contact," commissioned for the occasion. In addition, he and Murray Louis, his longtime collaborator at New York's Henry Street Playhouse, took daily classes with young dancers in the festival's training program.

In addition there were programs choreographed or danced, or both, by Louis and two European-based former members of Nikolais's company -- Carolyn Carlson, who for several years headed her own modern dance troupe at the Paris Opera and is now based in Venice, and Susan Buirge, who has been prime mover in the French contemporary dance scene for more than a decade and, as artistic adviser of Danse à Aix, is the person who brought this year's program into

And there was might be called a third generation of Nikolais disciples. They in-clude the young French companies, Beau Geste and Lolita, whose ranks include graduntes of the Centre National de Danse Contemporaine at Angers, which Nikolais headed for several years after it was created in 1978 by the French Cultural Ministry. And other programs included choreographers and dancers who have worked or studied with Buirge.

The most fun at the festival seems to have been the street project, choreographed by Nikolais for gymnasts and staged in Cours Mirabeau, Aix's short but grandiose principal street, wide and shaded by majestic rows of plane trees.

The theme was that man seems to want to fly," Nikolais said. "Western man at least, not Eastern - Eastern dancers don't extend, they don't jump. So for this occasion I decided to join the Western world, be part of the milieu that wants to escape." For his "School for Bird People," about half the length of Cours Mirabeau was closed off and the gymnast-dancers were brought on "nesting" in a wagon of hay towed by a tractor. One by one they tumbled off and went into action on ropes dangled down from high in the trees.

One of Nikolais's early jobs was playing the piano accompaniment in a silent movie house, and he did not really settle on dance until, as a young man in the early 1930s, he was bowled over by the experience of seeing a performance by Mary Wigman, the German modern dance pioneer. But he had always been interested in the technical as-pects of production, and beginning in 1953 with his own company he began to build up a body of works of dance theater in which his own choreography, sets, costumes, lighting, and ad hoc electronic sound vied for audience attention and combined in stunning theatricality.

The titles of some of best known ones are a program in themselves: "Masks, Props and Mobiles," "Kaleidoscope," "Totem, go," "Tower," "Tensile Involvement," "Video Games," "Mechanical Organ," "Schema" (his 1980 creation for the Paris Opera) and. his new work for Aix. "Contact."

N the beginning, Nikolais's works often disconcerted the dance audience and he was sometimes accused of dehumanizing the dancer. Yet he says that "I always motivated everything I did by dance," and that while many of his works present the dancer as part of an environment, there are as many pieces that are not oriented that Nikolais says he is trying to raise funds to do a retrospective of his work. "I want to go over all the videos and find the things I think hold up. We won't need everything; I explore the same idea in different pieces and some of them have similar subject matter.

"What interests me in the early pieces is the minimalism. How did I have the guts to have a dancer just stand there and swing a leg back and forth thirty times?"

Nikolais praised the young European dancers that he has been teaching at Aix. "They take their classes much more seriously than Americans," he said. "They are much more focused." Americans tend to spread themselves too thin these days, he added, "they take everything, classical, modern, Argentine tangos, baton throwing . . ."

He spoke with regret about a couple of opportunities lost through the deaths of potential collaborators. One was a project he was discussing with Buckminster Fuller be-fore the architect-engineer died in 1983. 'And about a year before he died, George Balanchine asked me to do something for his New York City Ballet. I would have loved to do that."

The idea of Balanchine's neoclassical troupe doing a work by Nikolais is an in-triguing one, but when Nikolais speaks of his idea of dance it is one that Balanchine easily could have subscribed to.

"Dance," says Nikolais, "is motion that contains its own intelligence —it is not mere

Searching for the Real Picodon

AOU, France — This is a rugged, mountainous and captivating corner of the world, a rather lost little patch of the Midi. It's a land where, on most summer days, the weatherman pro-nounces that the day will be beau et chaud, and where purple plots of lavender and hys-sop emellish the Kodachrome landscape of blue skies, green fields, and terra cotta roofs. As you drive along the steep and winding departmental roads, crossing the streams the French like to call rivers, you are likely to be detained by a passing band of goats roaming in search of the tasty herbs and mountain wildflowers that will make fragrant and rich their highly prized milk.

For this is chevre land, a region where, historically, every farmer had at least one

PATRICIA WELLS

"poor man's cow." The locals talk of days not so long ago when children were raised on goat's milk and when breakfast consisted of pain de campagne spread with fresh-churned goat's butter, and café au lait was made, goat's butter, and eye du un was made, necessarily, with stearning goat's milk.

When the goats stopped producing milk during the cooler months, families dug into terra cotta pots in search of picodon, tiny discs of chèvre washed several times in homemade gnole, or eau-de-vie, then airdried and put away to age and harden, to last through the long days of winter.

Today, this traditional mountain cheese of the Drôme and Ardèche departments is enjoying a solid rebirth. Picodon is one of the latest cheeses to obtain its Appellation d'Origine Contrôlèe (AOC), meaning that its history and tradition is being protected and its method and region of fabrication strictly defined and limited.

Ideally, the AOC should make for better cheese. But in the minds of Solange and Emile Magnet, cheesemakers who campaigned for 23 years to obtain the AOC granted to picodon in 1983, the fight may not have been worth it.
"We had to make a lot of concessions."

Magnet said with a shrug, sipping a bottle of beer on the front porch of his farm, a porch properly decorated with a colorful poster depicting France's 27 AOC cheeses. To obtain the AOC, the cheesemakers had to agree to expand the geographic limits beyond their little corner of the Drome, and gave in to a shorter aging time.

While the picodon of autrefois was aged for months, the picodon of the 1980s can go to market at the tender age of 12 days. In other words, the hard piquant pungent disc the locals consider the authentic picodon resembles not at all the fresh, mild, faintly fragrant little goat cheese that looks much like any young chevre found in all parts of France. Now, instead of a single authentic picodon there are indeed, many.

"I'm afraid what's happened is that the taste of our local cheese is being flattened. At 12 days, the cheese hasn't had a chance to develop any character." Magnet complains. He insists that a minimum of a month's aging, what he likes to call un petit mois, is necessary to give the cheese character and flavor,

HE situation is not unique to picodon ry is being replayed all over France. A poster for the Fête du Picodon.

Everywhere, locals want their cheese to taste as it always has, and local palates usually prefer the stronger, rather than milder.

At the same time, the merchants in Paris try to convince farmers to produce a cheese that will please their own clientele, whose tastes are leaning more and more toward cheeses that are lighter, blander, aged for hours or days, not weeks or months.

To make matters even more complicated, today "local" tastes change drastically from village to village.

According to Michèle Tariot, a Saoû cheesemaker who sells her picodon at the markets in nearby Crest and Saillans, local tastes change by the kilometer.
"When I go to Crest, I know I'll sell more creamy cheese, while in Saillans, 15 kilometers away, the older the cheese, the better they love it," she says.

Like many of their neighbors in the Drôme, Michèle and Guy Tariot gave up raising pigs for goats several years ago, as a national appetite for goat cheese grew, and local banks decided that the future of the department was in goat cheese and the spar-kling white wine known as Clairette de Die. "But if you see people making goat cheese, it's not necessarily out of a love of cheesemaking," explained one farmer. "It's be-cause people can't make a living selling goat milk to a co-op, but they can by making their own goat cheese and selling it at markets."

To appeal to local and national tastes, most farmers, like the Tariots and the Magnets, go to market with several varieties of picodon. Young cheese, one to two days old, is sold as tonne de chèvre, while those 8 to 10 days old are called tonne fraiche. The older picodon, made by what is now known as the methode Dieulefit, is aged in the traditional

HE Hollywood of the 1920s still fascinates millions and books on the subject tumble from the presses to rival in sales those on dieting, health and cuisine.

In the late '20s Horace Liveright, an adventurous publisher who had on his list Freud, O'Neill, Dreiser, Sherwood Anderson and Faulkner, was approached by a young film buff who proposed a book on filming and film folk.

"Are you insane?" the publisher said.

"People who go to the movies don't read and people who read don't go to the movies." In 1925 it was estimated that more than 50 million Americans went to the movies every week. The number of those who attend regularly these days has sunk to five million. The absences apparently stay home to read of Hollywood's quondam glory, of the flamboyant personalities that peopled it six decades ago and of the scandals that once were

In large measure what they read is untruthful trash, culled and rehashed from fan magazines and yellowed tabloids. Recently there have been some exceptions. Among these are Gloria Swanson's candid "Swanthese are Gloria Swanson's candid "Swanson on Swanson," David Robinson's exhaustive biography of Charlie Chaplin (containing valuable information missing from Chaplin's autobiography), Leonard Mosley's account of Darryl F. Zanuck's ups and downs, and now Leatrice Gilbert Fountain's "Dark Star," the story of her father, John Gilbert, whose celluloid shadow set women to dreaming of wild amorous abandon.

Gilbert was a dazzler in his day. His films

Gilbert was a dazzler in his day. His films played to capacity in the cinema palaces, but his private life received more coverage than his movies.

Actresses found him irresistible. Laurette Taylor never got over their affair and took to drink. His romance with Greta Garbo was avidly followed in the press. Lillian Gish, the Duse of the screen, selected him to be her leading man, but she alone seems to have remained aloof, disliking their kissing scenes and rejecting his marriage proposal. To the disappointment of Garbo he wed Ina Claire, the American theater's foremost comedi-

"How does it feel to be married to a star?," a reporter asked Miss Claire. "Ask Mr. Gilbert," she replied, but the headlines read: "Gilbert Marries Stage Ac-

That marriage ended in divorce and he married a film beauty, Virginia Bruce. At the end of his life Marlene Dietrich was his great and good friend.

When he challenged Jim Tully, the hobo author, to listiculfs in a Hollywood restaurant because the latter had insulted him in a magazine article, Tully knocked him out. Photographs of the fracas hit the front pages of all the tabloids, but editorially Gilbert was praised for defending his honor.

IS dutiful daughter has spent years collecting information about her once-famous father. She has interviewed his surviving associates, his friends and lady friends, plowed through newspaper morgues to read all that has been printed about him and has studied his old films.

She has affectionate memories of him, but she was only 11 when he died in 1936 at age 37, and her mother, the late Leatrice Joy, then a young actress in de Mille productions, divorced Gilbert shortly before their child was born. Her parents remained on cordial terms and he was often a guest in his former wife's house and adored his little daughter. She has set the scene of movieland in its hectic heyday and sketched a whole gallery of its prominent figures at that period, but her main purpose is to refute the legend that Gilbert, the highest-salaried silent screen ac-tor, was defeated by the talkie test. Gilbert made his vocal debut in "The

from "Romeo and Juliet" with Norma Shearer as his Juliet. In this skit it was played first straight and then as a spoof of what might happen to it were it rewritten by a Hollywood hack. Even the drama critic Brooks Atkinson found no fault with Gilbert's delivery.

A short time later Gilbert starred in a terrible talkie. Audiences tittered at the sound of Gilbert's high voice uttering love declarations. His daughter implies that on this occasion the microphone had been rigged to register him falsetto. Why? Because Louis B. Mayer was bent on driving him from the screen or at least forcing him to break his lucrative contract.

Gilbert was born in a tiny Utah town, the child of theatrical parents, members of a roving stock company. His father deserted his wife and son and the boy grew up imagining that he had been born out of wedlock. He delighted in that delusion for it marked him as an exception. Years later he learned that he was painfully legitimate when his wayward father showed up as an extra in one of his son's films. He was deeply resentful for his fatherless childhood. He lent his returned parent money, but stipulated that he must not appear in any of his movies and must avoid seeing him again.

Drifting to Los Angeles when he was in his teens, the future star found work as a scriptwriter and as an actor. The French director, Maurice Tourneur, took him on as an assistant and the youngster, a quick study, mas-tered the technical side of his trade sufficiently to direct some forgotten minor movies himself, but he settled for acting. Of tall, athletic build, he moved gracefully and his intense dark eyes threw longing glances that inflamed lovelorn females. His flashing smile disclosed a set of gleaming teeth beneath the mustache of Dumas musketeer. He was photogenic despite a long, pointed nose.

Under John Ford's direction he impersonated a Mississippi riverboat gambler in "Cameo Kirby." Irving Thalberg, recently appointed production chief at the newly formed MGM, realized his potential and signed him to a long-term contract.

O a marked degree the Gilbert screen image was Thalberg's creation. He tested his discovery in supporting roles and in program features and, judging audience reaction from Gilbert's mounting fan mail, carried the campaign forward. Against the protests of Mayer, the studio manager, chose him to be Mae Murray's partner in Erich von Stroheim's exotic ver-sion of "The Merry Widow." The shooting of that film was troubled with temperamental conflicts, but when released it injoyed

Gilbert's status was further secured when he played the hero in King Vidor's epic of World War I, "The Big Parade," which broke all box-office records, running two years on Broadway.

A Swedish starlet had been imported by MGM and showed promise in her two initial American vehicles. She was to appear in a strong sex drama, "Flesh and the Devil," and its director, Clarence Brown, was searching for the leading man. Gilbert, who had seen and admired her work, volunteered. He had not met her and they were only introduced when he came to the set to enact some torrid love scenes. Their romance before the cameras blossomed into a reality and she moved to his hilltop chateau and stayed for three years.

There were constant rumors that they were to be married and a marriage ceremony was arranged. It was to be a double wedding - Vidor and Eleanor Boardman being the other couple - but Garbo, while the Hollywood elite waited, failed to arrive. Mayer was among the guests when it became apparent that Gilbert's prospective bride had run out on him. Mayer slapped the deserted bridegroom on the back and made a lewd comment. Gilbert wheeled on him and knocked him down. As Mayer was helped to his feet he hissed through his teeth, "I'll destroy you if it costs me a million dollars." The daughter's biography suggests that Mayer made good his threat.

Despite her absence at the altar on the announced wodding day Garbo and Gilbert were co-starred in two more silent films. One of these films exploited their private rela-tions in its title. "Love," though its scenario was derived from Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina," It was released with the choice of two different endings. In the larger cities the tragic conclusion of Tolstoy's novel was fol-

Stockholm's Short Summer

by Richard Soderfund

TOCKHOLM — Stockholm is a "city that floats on water," a Swedish writer once observed, and ideally one should approach this 700-yearold capital by sea. Situated on 14 islands where Lake Malaren connects to the Baltic, the city seems to shimmer against the sky.

But even travelers who arrive at Arlanda

Airport, 30 miles away, have plenty of op-portunity to enjoy Stockholm's many waterways and bays. They can stay aboard a big steam yacht once owned by Barbara Hutton or sail on restored old steamers. There is even a youth hostel on an old windiammer moored across from the Royal Palace.

The brief summer season from June through August, when migrating birds have returned and Stockholm's 650,000 residents turn their attention to the sun to make up for the long winter, is the best time to visit.

The Gamla Stan (Old Town) section is a reminder of the time when Sweden's warrior kings, buried in Riddarholm Church, conquered portions of Germany, Russia and Poland. The central area of Stockholm, dominated by the 600-room, gray stone palace and the 15th-century cathedral, is relatively small. Since cars are banned from much of it, it is best seen on foot.

For a view that on clear days extends halfway to Finland, go to the 500-foot Kaknas TV Tower, which is open from 9 A.M. to midnight; entry fee: the equivalent of about $1.50. Some other vantage points: the terrace outside Solliden Restaurant at Skansen, the outdoor museum; Katarina Elevator near the Old Town and Fjallgatan on the southern cliffs overlooking the harbor oppo-

The red brick City Hall, where Nobel Prize banquets are held in a hall with walls of gilded mosaic tiles, was built between 1911 and 1923 in a mixture of styles: Venetian, Renaissance and Byzantine. Its tower, topped with three golden crowns (a national symbol), offers a fine view, accessible, however, only by stairs.

Sightseeing boats depart from dockside under the railway bridge close to City Hall. offering cruises of one or two hours. Fares range from $3 for one hour to $4.50 for two hours; children half price. Others go to Drottningholm Palace, the present home of the royal family, with its elaborate garden and 17th-century theater (fare $3.25), or into Lake Malaren for tours of Birka Island and to the Baroque-style Gripsholm Castle (fare $7.75). A combined bus-boat tour lasting about three hours costs $8, including admission to City Hall. It may be booked at various hotels.

Some boats depart from Nybroviken, near the Royal Drama Theater, and from the quay outside the Grand Hotel. They go out to some of the thousands of islands in the archipelago that stretches 50 miles into the Baltic (fare: about $8). The boats include white steamers, some of them coal burners. The food, especially steaks, herring, and plaice, on such boats as the Bjorkfjarden and the Gustafsberg is considered quite good.

One 90-minute tour (fare: $4) goes to Vaxholm, an island fortress, and a four-hour tour (fare: $9) goes south to Uto, an island with an inn offering such Swedish delicacies as herring with sour cream ($5), pike mousse or quenelles ($8) and rainbow trout ($8.50).

HE Grand Hotel at 8 Blasieholmhamnen (22.10.20) dates from 1874. It has 352 rooms, the best in front with a view of the harbor and the Royal Palace, ranging in price from $70 to $100 for two. The Grand's smorgasbord, served in the Cafe Veranda, is a bargain ($7) compared to the more famous one at Operakaliaren ($13).

The Schiphol Connection: Gateway to Deregulation?

by Roger Collis

EELIE SMIT-KROES, Dutch minister of transport and public works, no-nonsense liberal and the doyenne of the airline deregulation movement in Europe, makes the issue breathtakingly simple: "To fly is just a product like clothes; it's nothing exceptional. We are living in a community, so let's give con-sumers the opportunity of flying to as many places as possible at a good price. Govern-ments are looking to the survival of their national carriers rather than what they can be doing for the community. We need to accept that aviation is an economic activity and the market has to be free to do its work."

For Smit-Kroes, this is more than a policy, or even an article of faith; this is a crusad or even an article of faith; this is a crusade. She is fighting hard for liberalization not only of fares, but capacity, and new air routes opened up between small as well as large airports. (A measure of the task is the recent refusal of Alitalia to allow KLM to open a new route between Amsterdam and Venice, and to stop three KLM flights to Rome so as to redress Alitalia's 48.7 percent share of the traffic between the two countries to 50 percent to 50 percent.)

Silvarity and

Smit-Kroes and Nicholas Ridley, her opposite number in Britain, are two of the principal movers and shakers in the battle against airline protectionism in Europe. The liberal Anglo-Dutch bilateral agreement signed in June 1984 has now been extended into what amounts to an "open skies" regime. Airlines can file whatever fares they like (full economy and business class as well as discount, or "promotional" fares, subject only to disapproval by both governments. "People must recognize that all tariffs are lower than before," says Smit-Kroes.)
This power of double veto is to prevent "predatory" pricing that "breaks up the market." One measure is consistency. Smit-Kroes recalls one U. S. airline in 1978 offering a promotional fare of one guilder from Amsterdam to New York. "I said I'd allow it if they kept the fare for at least one year. But of course they couldn't. They came to me on their knees after two weeks and asked to withdraw it. This kind of thing just deludes the public. The government has the right and onty to intervene," she says.

The Anglo-Dutch agreement has turned out to be a huge success. Traffic on the Amsterdam-London route has grown almost twice as fast as traffic between these cities and other points in Europe. Some fares have come down and restrictions on others have been eased. Eleven airlines are currently serving four different airports in the Netherlands and 23 in Britain. There are now more points in Britain with a direct service to Schiphol than there are to Heathrow.

This reflects the importance of Schiphol as an international gateway. (There is a popula-tion of 180 million within a radius of 250 miles.) One-third of Schiphol's nine million passengers on scheduled airlines last year were transferring to other destinations. The airport has about 65 scheduled carriers serving 185 destinations in 90 countries.

Schiphol is consistently popular with travelers. In a poll last April, members of the International Air Travelers Association votd Schiphol their favorite airport for comfort and convenience. It is a single terminal airport with an average connecting time of 40 to 50 minutes. Maximum walking time from an aircraft to another is 10 minutes. It is remarkably free of congestion, it has a capacity far in excess of its current traffic, there is a hotel in the transit area, an abundance of situation any more," Smit-Kroes says. restaurants and services and duty-free shops said to be the most reasonable in Europe.

includes the addition of a fifth pier, improved facilities for regional carriers, a new business center, a fully automated baggage handling system, better access to the airport by road and improving the already excellent rail services from the station underneath the terminal building. The so-called Schipholline connects with the international railroad network to destinations in Belgium, West Germany and beyond.

What this all means, is that Schiphol - in many ways a showcase airport, strategically in a liberal corner of Europe — will hasten the domino effect that Anglo-Dutch deregulation is having on neighboring countries, especially West Germany and Belgium, by siphoning off traffic. It was mainly fear of losing traffic that forced West Germany to sign a liberal bilateral agreement (although not as liberal as that with the Dutch) with Britain at the end of last year. This was followed by a similar agreement between Britain and Luxembourg. Belgium has also liberalized its bilateral agreement with Britain. Many fares between Britain and the Continent have come down as a result. And there is heightened awareness among travel-ers, especially American, to alternate rout-ings to Europe via Heathrow and Schiphol. Smit-Kroes maintains that "it's not only a question of tariffs; you have first to have free question of tariffs; you have first to have free competition, which means access to the market and being able to mount the capacity you want." This has been a major obstacle, she says, to crafting new bilateral agreements. "My sorrow is dealing with people who have a completely different philosophy on transport. For example, when I asked the French for more access to their market, they said: Start with lowering the tariffs. That's completely the wrong way. It's so hard to discuss. pletely the wrong way. It's so hard to discuss. If we ask for a flight to Le Havre, it's asking for something out of this world. We can get it only if we give up a flight to Paris."

Within the European Community, there is a split between the protectionist south and the more liberal north; Portugal, Spain, Italy and Prance are the most recalcitrant. A country like Belgium is somewhere in beveen. It seems that the Germans might soon be prepared to do a deal with the Dutch.

Meanwhile the British and Dutch plan to exert pressure for multilateral liberalization

at the European Transport Council, which the Dutch will chair for the first six months of next year, followed by the British. "Ridley and I made a deal that we would handle it together to give us a full year of the chair-manship," Smit-Kroes says. One item on the mansinp, "sint-kroes says, One man on the agenda will be the extension of the EC interregional directive, which allows free entry for aircraft carrying up to 70 passengers on routes between "category two" airports, to include major hubs. This would open up more routes and provide consumers with a greater choice.

"We are fighting for a market-oriented policy for air transport. We are trying it at the conference table and by example. But we need pressure from consumers who say to their patliaments that they don't accept this

And the ideal situation? "The one we have with Britain. Nothing is ideal but this is The Dutch have an expansion plan, to cost deregulation and it's working quite well. $400 million over the next 10 years, to boost That's the system we need in Europe."

lowed, while in the provinces it had a happy ending. Later, in the 1930s, when his popularity had declined, Garbo generously sought to restore Gilbert's fortunes with a comeback attempt. She insisted that he instead of Laurence Olivier — play her lover in the talkie "Queen Christina." He was given the role, but his reappearance stirred little interest and brought no offers for his

ILBERT rose to movie eminence on the wings of the Latin lover craze inaugurated by Rudoiph Valentino. When Valentino died suddenly in 1926 Gilbert replaced him, though he was certainly a less glamorous performer. Already several non-Latin screen stars - Ronald Colman, Ricardo Cortez and to a lesser degree John Barrymore and the elder Douglas Fairbanks - took on a Latin look. When the talkies arrived it was the WASP types - Gary

.Cooper, Spencer Tracy, Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable — who were favored. Two roles promised by Thalberg to Gilbert went to Gable.

It was Gilbert's dashing style and verve that made him a darling of the '20s, and that decade was his true realm. An effective silent screen lover, schooled and publicized by Thalberg, he fell below Valentino in that capacity. That he was a gifted artist-actor is open to question. He was a headliner and not an intuitive interpreter. Whatever uniform or hairdo he sported, whether posing as a Russian, a Prussian, a Latin or an Americano, he was John Gilbert doing and sometimes overdoing his number. Possibly in happier circumstances he might have developed. There is a hint of this in one of his talkies, "Downstairs," which he wrote himself. As a callous bounder of a chauffeur employed in a Viennese household

— a character obviously borrowed from Strindberg's "Miss Julie" — he delivered one of his best performances.

It may be that had he left the cinema for the stage he would have matured into the actor he wanted to be. He had had only stock company training as a child and moviemaking had transformed him into a trickster. repeating his routine over and over in plots brewed at studio conferences. He was in need of higher theatrical education and his fantastic success in films blinded him. Instead of meeting a new challenge and going forward, he retreated into heavy drinking and dreams of murdering Louis B. Mayer. He sat out his long $10,000-a-week-contract, consigned now and then to a third-rate movie, sank into a despondent state and died prematurely.

Gilbert, his friends have testified, engagingly mocked the heated ballyhoo methods of Thalberg, who billed his star as "The Great Lover of the Silver Screen," but, naturally enough, his missed the idiotic mob adoration when it disappeared.

His daughter has not sentimentalized her portrait of him, aware that he contributed to his own downfall, but there is a stab of pathos in the story of a onetime idol and his bewilderment when yesterday's magic no longer cast its spell. Recently, revivals of two of his better films - "Flesh and the Devil" and "A Woman of Affairs," a censor-cautious adaptation of Michael Arlen's sensational sex novel. The Green Hat," a best-seller of 1924, with Garbo as the lady of frail virtue — have found enthusiastic andiences. An event of the autumn London season is to be a reshowing of "The Big Parade," with symphony orchestra accompaniment.

It appears after all, though he is gone he has not been forgotten.

Waters and Memories of a Spanish Spa

by Mary Peirson Kennedy

ARRATRACA, Spain — Billing it-self as the Switzerland of Andalusia, this tiny mountain village is hoping to bring back some of its lost days of glory when Empress Eugenie of France, Alexandre Dumas, Lord Byron and several kings of Spain were among the thousands who poured into town to take the

The sulfur waters -- claimed to be beneficial for rheumatism, nervous disorders, in-fertility and skin ailments — still gush forth at 700 liters (185 gallons) a minute into the elegant marble and stone building that once belonged to the Countess of Teba, as Eughnie was before becoming Napoleon III's con-sort. The marble bath she used still stands at one end of the building as does a commode for a chamber pot that perhaps she also used.

The baths are open every year from July 1 to Sept. 30, and for 8,000 pesetas (about $45) for 15 days one can daily drink, bathe, shower or inhale the vapors of sulfur water (the sulfurous odor is faint) under the care of a resident doctor.

In front of the baths is the Hostal del Principe, built in 1830 as a residence for the Ferdinand VII when he came to hunt the capra hispanica in the days when this goat, indigenous to the area, was plentiful. Today the mountainous area behind Carratraca is about the last refuge of this handsome animal, and it is about to be declared a national refuge offering very limited and expensive hunting until the herds can be built up

The hostal remains one of the nicest buildings in town, with a beautiful patio, spacious but sparsely furnished rooms and simple but well prepared meals.

A hundred years ago the town abounded with gambling casinos, elegant carriages and nightly parties in the spacious summer residences of the wealthy.

Except for a few Victorian villas, all this has vanished (including the more than 7,000 people who crowded into town during the season), but what remains is a small but dedicated group of people who spend their vacations here, some taking the waters and some not. It is a group that would just as soon that the rest of the world not know about this peaceful little retreat, its cool summer days, its friendly people and its ET in the northern part of the province of Målaga, the area surrounding Car-ratraca is a nature lover's paradise full of hiking paths into the mountains, Mozarabic and Christian ruins, mountain lakes for swimming, and the cave of Dona Trini-dad, 11 kilometers (seven miles) from town.

This cave is not for the timid. To get inside one must pass through an obstacle course of rocks, but in the interior steps have been built. Anyone can go there and there is no charge, but it is more interesting to go with Don Miguel Guerrero, a genial man who is secretary of the city hall, an amateur historian and above all a promotor of his hometown. He can be found most weekday mornings in his office in the huge Arabic-style wood and stone palacio that serves as city hall now, but was once the summer residence of Doña Trinidad Grund, Carratraca's one-time patroness. The daughter of a noted inventor and industrialist, Dona Trinidad had great faith in the curative powers of the

Don Miguel will tell you to bring your own lighting and to be prepared to climb some very precarious rock formations amid magnificent stalagmite formations. The cave has some interesting prehistoric drawings. To make an appointment with Don Miguel for seeing the caves call 45.80.16. There is no set price for the trip but a group of up to eight might offer him 2,000 pesetas (about $12).

Twenty kilometers (12 miles) from Carratraca is a area known as El Chorro, a series of emerald-green man-made lakes set in the midst of sloping pine forests where one can picnic and swim. Beyond El Chorro, on the road to Alora, are the remains of a stone church of the Mozarabs, Spanish Christians under Moslem rule who adopted the Arabic language and culture. In the next village from Carratraca, Ardales, there are lovely sixth-century castle ruins that dominate the hill overlooking the town.

As a village, Carratraca is relatively new. Founded in 1820, its population has always been about 1,100. The town is filled with whitewashed houses and verdant patios. Most of the residents own plots of land outside of town where they cultivate al-monds, olives and lemons. At the top of the town there is a bull ring built during the heyday of the baths (again due to the largesse of Doña Trinidad) and according to Don Miguel, some of the stones used in its construction go back to Roman times. There is no doubt that Romans and Greeks used the waters here," he says.

"Castles and museums are everywhere. but good people are hard to find," says Sylvia North, a journalist who has written extensively about her adopted home and one of a handful of foreigners who live here full time. She and her husband, Frank, a sculptor, bought an abandoned mill 12 years ago and have slowly renovated it. "You can't imagine how wonderful a place this is, I stopped feeling like a foreigner almost immediately," she recalls.

Matareo Benavides, 24, who works at the baths (his family owns them) says that young people come from all over to Saturday nigh music sessions in the bars in the central plaza, that the town holds poetry contests and art shows and that because so many people have land to work the unemploymen is not as severe here as in other parts of the province. Francisco Gutierrez. 27, left the dress-designing business in Madrid and came home to form his own small business of making very modern clothes for the young. His frequent fashion shows at the Hostal del Principe are major social events.

HE annual village fair is held Aug. 13-15 and there are unusually good bulls and well-known bullfighters for the fights, thanks to the generosity of a foreigner who has good reason to be grateful to Carratraca. Wolfram Theuemeister, a German crashed his two-engine plane into the side of the mountain behind the town on a foggy day in 1981. A quickly organized rescue team from the village got him and his six passengers out safely.

The popularity of the baths is coming back. The villagers proudly tell you that the heir to the Norwegian throne was born just one year after Princess Sonia visited the baths of Carratraca. Eighty people can be served in the marble baths and upstairs rooms. During the season, there are other small pensions, but the Hostal del Principe is the only one open year round. It offers full pension at 1,800 pesetas a person or 700 pesetas for lodging alone. The hotel has 34 rooms, single and double, but there are no private balls. In the summer it is best to reserve (tel: Carratraca 45-8020). At the entrance of the town there is a small restaurant, El Trillo, that has become popular with people from all over the province. Juan Sanchez, the owner, keeps the menu small. His specialties are an excellent pate. tender beef and pork, and fresh fish. In season game can be ordered ahead of time. For reservations call 45.81.99.

Carratraca is 58 kilometers (about 35 miles) from Málaga. Take route Č344 from Malaga to Pizzarra and then route C337 for Alora and from there to Carratraca.

winning smile and hearty laugh, also sells another regional specialty, known as foudjou.
For foudjou, she combines leftover cheese asually what remains at the bottom of the previous batch of foudjou - with requefort, fromage blanc, hot peppers and gnole. It is a wonderful, spreadable cheese, pungent enough to make your eyes water.

Cheese made on the Tariot and Magnet farms can be purchased at the farm or at the several outdoor food markets listed below. What does one look for in buying pico-don? There is no surefire indicator, but after sampling dozens of farm-made goat cheese all over France, I have found one consistent theme: The best young chèvre is usually the purest white, clean and fresh looking, and firm enough to stand up on its own. On the contrary, some of the best aged chèvre I've ever tasted looked like shriveled little rocks, with a gray or orangish rind, and a fine covering of blueish mold.

To sample excellent picodon in the area's restaurants, I have two spots to recommend highly, both modest local establishments, where one should eat well for around 100 francs a person.

OT far from the village of Saoti (pro-nounced soo), which will hold it's annual Picodon festival on July 21, there is Restaurant Maille, where, along with a truly piquant picodon on the cheese platter, there are two items one cannot miss: the tender, creamy truffle omelet filled with honest, fragrant chunks of the region's black truffles, and superbly fresh truite meunière, trout fresh from a nearby hatchery cooked simply and quickly in butter. With the med-ley of regional specialties, order a fresh green salad and a bottle of one of the local Côtesdu-Rhône — the red from the cooperative in Vinsobres is just fine.

This is a simple, no-frills village restaurant, full of blue-collar workers and French couples on vacation with their dogs. There is only one copy of the handwritten menu - I guess the regulars know it by heart - so if you need to consult it, the waitress will have to pull it out of the glass case in the window.

L'Oustan d'Anais, north of Carpentras, is a bit fancier, a modern Provençal mas with pink stucco walls and a well-kept garden of olive trees, rosemary and thyme. The decor is a bit on the cute side, but ignore it and prepare yourself for some superb, original food prepared by the restaurant's owner, Yannick Daubert.

Her goal is to offer regional dishes you tan d'Anaïs include the superb saute d'ag-won't find on every menu, and she has suc-neau au romarin, infused with stalks of fresh ceeded royally. Who could complain about a steaming hot terrine d'aubergine, prepared with the loveliest, fresh eggplant and topped by a classic béchamel sauce? (The only problem is that the dish arrived a bit too hot, and it took a good 15 minutes for it cool down enough to sample.)

Another specialty, a must for those who love picodon at its most piquant, is her original gratin de picodon au pebre d'ai. The gratin, which is light enough to sample as a first course, hearty enough to stand on its own as a main course, is a piping hot blend of well-aged picodon covered lightly with cream and summer savory, the rosemary-like herb that goes by many names, including sarriette, poivre d'ain and poebre d'ain.

The dish could really be considered a Provençal fondue, for it is eaten by dipping slices of bread into the creamy mass. If you're lucky that day, the bread will come from the village bakery at nearby Crillon-le-Brave, where Didier Suran recently rebuilt an ancient wood-fired oven, making a mar-velous pain de campagne. A visit to the newly restored, once-abandoned perched village is worth the minor detour. Other excellent dishes to sample at l'Ousrosemary, and the hearty tian de pieds de porc aux truffes, a sumptuous, fragrant dish pre-pared with exceptional care. With all of this, sample the house wine, a local red from the village of Bédoin.

The rolling cheese and dessert trays are hard to resist: A little wicker basket of fresh sarriette rests amid its regional cheese assortment, and desserts include a series of homemade sherbets served from stoneware crocks. Service is friendly, chatty and impeo-

Nissan Unscrambles Teeming Tokyo With New, Fact-Packed Guidebook For Visitors

TOKYO: This sprawling metropolis of 12 million scurrying inhabitants is, without question, the world's most perplexing capital. Streets run in rings around the Imperial Palace. Building numbers are erratic and if a visitor doesn't read or speak Japanese, hopes of asking understandable directions or deciphering road signs are nil.

But new help is at hand: the just-published, distinctively orange-covered 132 page NISSAN GUIDE TO TOKYO AND ENVIRONS. A lucidly written, fact-packed English language compendium of every significant place, feature, address and telephone number that visiting tourists or executives need at their fingertips to take all the confusion out of a Tokyo tour.

Nissan, like the other giants in the automotive field, Michelin and Shell, has now gone into the guidebook business with a remarkable, and impressive paperback which fits anugly and conveniently in a pocket, attache case or pocketbook. Illustrating the wellwritten, thoroughly researched text are 25 easy-to-decipher street maps of various Tokyo locations. Little space has been wasted on pretty pictures; this is an informative hard-working guidebook for people in a hurry who hadly need swift help. The giant Japanese automotive firm obviously spared no expense in producing this detail-crammed book. Expert foreign correspondents from the U.S.A., U.K. and Switzerland, based in Tokyo and knowledgeable about the city, from its broad boulevards to its teeming back alleys, were hired to write the guide, and their insights give the volume an extra dimension not found in the usual tourist guide to monuments and nightspots.

They drop in such interesting tidbits as: Thursday is the only day of the week that the Horyoji treasures are on open display in Tokyo's national museum; or that 6.00 a.m. is auction time at the Tsukiji Fish Market when the best tuna are put on the block to be snapped up by the Sushi and Sashimi trade. All of which makes this new Nissan Guide a significant new addition to every Asia bound traveller's bookshelf.

Plans are to revise it every two years and to develop 15 new guide books on other areas of Japan in the near future. The next book in the series, on Kyoto/Osaka, is due out in October. A copy of this new NISSAN GUIDE TO TOKYO AND ENVIRONS can be obtained by writing to:

Interest in Picturephones Revives After Poor Start

By ERIC N. BERG

EW YORK - Wall Street analysis wrote off the technology long ago, and telecommunications consultants are not much more hopeful. But picturephones telephones with cameras and monitors attached so callers can see each other — may soon establish themselves in the market following some favorable scientific developments, proponents of the technology say.

It has been more than 20 years since visitors to the 1964 World's Fair in Flushing Meadows, New York, marveled at the first picture phone. Despite the initial fascination with the concept, however, the picturephone never took hold. Transmitting pictures required high-speed phone lines that most households could not afford. And

Only the most crucial parts of

using picturephones for longdistance business meetings meant either traveling to "te-leconferencing" centers out-side one's office or equipping conference rooms with costly monitors, cameras and micro-an image need to be transmitted. "It could cost you $1 million just to install the room," said Charles W. Smith, a specialist in new services for American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which showed the 1964 picture-phone and has since scrapped it. "The costs were prohibitive."

OW, however, a number of small companies, including Widcom Inc. of Campbell, California; Pictel Corp. of Peabody, Massachusetts, and Avelex of Lanham, Maryland, are trying to revive picturephone technology by addressing its principal drawbacks: inconvenience and cost.

Instead of offering public teleconferencing rooms as AT&T did when it set up 11 teleconferencing centers around the United States a few years ago, virtually all the small companies are focusing on providing picturephone-type service inside corpora-tions because they believe managers will not travel to make a

The companies' researchers have also devised a way to sharply reduce the price by transmitting pictures over low-speed phone lines costing far less than their high-speed predecessors.

At the heart of all their work is the same basic concept:
Converting pictures to digital form, compressing the digital information so it can flow more rapidly over phone lines, and transmitting only the most crucial parts of an image.

Scientists are quickly discovering that by stripping away unimportant background information from a picture, and by continually transmitting only that part of a picture that is moving, such as a called the picture will be displayed on the other end as a caller's head, an image can still be displayed on the other end. (Fixed images do not have to be repeatedly sent.) The result is a picture of fair of quality — similar to that of television pictures sent from astronauts in space. The approach has come to be called "picture squeezing."

"In cases like these, most of the time on the phone is spent looking at documents or the subject of a business meeting," said Robert D. Widergren, president of Wideom. "Those are mostly Picture squeezing, in fact, has enabled Widcom to develop a desktop picturephone that transmits images at the rate of 56,000 bits a second. That may sound fast, but it is a fraction of the 1.5. million bits a second normally required for video transmission. The slower speed has cut transmission costs to $45 an hour, compared with $700 an hour using the faster speed. Avelex and Pictel should be able to offer service at similar or even lower prices when they come out with their own 56-kilobit-a-second

"If picturephone technology were to remain inconvenient and considerably expensive, it would remain unpopular," said G. William Meeker, Avelex's technical manager, "Our thrust is to (Continued on Page 13, Col. 5)

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chemical New York Corp., the sixth-largest U.S. bank holding company, said Thurs-day that its second-quarter profit rose 39.7 percent from a year ago, while its first-half earnings were up

The New York-based parent of Chemical Bank said its net was $107.3 million, or $2.03 a share, for the three months ended June 30, compared with $76.8 million, or $1.45 a share, a year earlier. First-half earnings totaled $197 million, or $3.71 a share, compared with $158.1 million, or $3.03 a share, a

Olivetti, Amid Computer Slump, Faces Problems at Home, Abroad

By Axel Krause

ROME - Two years ago, Olivetti SpA, Western Europe's largest office-automation group, was poised for major expansion in the United States and Europe, Plans included listing the company's stock on the New York Stock Exchange. Company executives and industry analysts said the sales outlook for Olivetti products, including data pro-cessing, office and private telecommunications cessing, orace and private transformational design the En-ropean sales of International Business Machines Corp. were about 10 times higher.

Today, amid a worsening slump in the world computer industry and fierce competition, Olivetti computer industry and tierce competition. Only this is trying to solve serious problems of its ailing affiliates in the United States and Britain. The company has dropped the plans to list its stock in New York. It is preparing to drop a proposed venture to build electronic typewriters in France with government-owned Cie. Generale d'Electricité, a move that the French company says violates their 1983 agreement. Oivetti is also playing down the importance of its recent accord with Toshiba, Japan's second-largest industrial group.

Japan's second-largest industrial group.

Meanwhile, Carlo de Benedetti, the company's ebullient chairman, is embroiled in a political controversy over a proposed acquisition of a 64controversy over a proposed acquisition of a 64percent share in a state-controlled food company in Italy. Mr. de Benedetti has been directing the takeover bid as head of a syndicate that is the second-largest shareholder in Olivetti after American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

However, Mr. de Benedetti's bid turned into a rolitical controvance last meanth when he add a political controversy last month when he told reporters that he had been offered a bribe to clinch the deal. The highly publicized affair, which Oli-vetti executives insist is unrelated to the company itself, was immediately denounced by Prime Min-ister Bettino Craxi and key members of the ruling Socialist party, who alleged the government had not been adequately consulted.

But Mr. de Benedetti reflected determined optimism about Olivetti's future during a recent interview in Rome, and played down the importance of his current problems. "We cannot produce a mir-acle a day, nor change our environment," he said, emphasizing that Olivetti has "a fantastic advantage" over its European and U.S. competitors: a financial-marketing-technological agreement with AT&T signed in 1983 but which only began taking

The agreement allowed AT&T to become Oli-The agreement allowed A1&1 to become Onvetti's largest single shareholder, with a 25-percent interest that the U.S. company can—and probably will—increase to 40 percent in 1988. The accord also specified that Olivetti would supply AT&T with a range of its products, mainly personal computers, and that the U.S. company would supply Oliverti its line of products, including dataprocessing and voice transmission equipment and software packages.

Last year, Olivetti supplied AT&T personal computers and other electronic products worth 288 billion lire for sale in the United States, a figure Mr. de Benedetti said would increase to 500 billion lire (about $265 million at current rates) in 1985. AT&T supplied Olivetti 9 billion lire of equipment in 1984, which will rise to 40 billion lire

Mr. de Benedetti said that Olivetti's consolidated sales this year will increase to a record 6 trillion lire from 4.57 trillion lire in 1984, while 1985 net profits were expected to rise at the same rate as in 1984. Net profit last year rose 20.6 percent from 1983 to a record 356 billion lire. The company's stock remains a favorite on the Milan stock ex-

Products introduced last year, such as a new line of personal computers currently accounting for about 30 percent of group sales, are selling well, particularly in Western Europe, where they ac-count for 72 percent of total sales. "Europe presents a far more optimistic picture than the United States," said Elserino Piol, Olivetti's executive vice president for strategy and development. "But this (Continued on Page 15, Col. 5)

Mexico is not a member of the cartel but had followed the group's pricing policies until several months ago. The announcement of the price cut implied that after the 13-member OPEC failed at a meeting in Vienna this week to agree on defending prices, Mexico was now acting on its own.

A spokesman at the OPEC secretariat in Vienna declined to comment on Mexico's move.

Before the OPEC talks on Sunday, Mexico's oil minister, Francisco Labastida Ochoa, warned that Mexico would have to "fully de-fend its national interests" if OPEC did not reach an accord on prices. He did not specify, but analysts said at the time it was clear that he meant Mexico would reduce its U.S. oil companies, which purchase half of Mexico's exports, will now pay $26.75 for Mexico's light oil and $23.50 for its heavy crude, down from the last posted prices of $27.75 and $24 respectively. In Asia, light oil will be sold for $26.50 and heavy, for $23 a barrel. Similarly, Mexico's prices for European clients will drop to $26.25 for light oil and $22.50 for heavy crude.

Levi Strauss Considers Buyout For $1.85 Billion

International Heraid Tribuic

NEW YORK - The head of Levi Strauss & Co., the San Francisco-based apparel maker, said Thursday that he was considering a proposal to take the company private in a trans-action valued at about $1.85

A spokesman for Robert Haas, president and chief executive officer, said the $50-ashare proposal would have the effect of returning ownership of the company to the descendants of Levi Strauss, the company's founder. Those families control about 40 percent of the company's stock and would give sup-port to the proposed buyout, the spokesman said.

Brenda Gall, a Merrill Lynch analyst, said, "This is a generous offer," amounting to a 40percent premium over the cur-rent price of the stock. She saw little likelihood that the proposed buyout would not be achieved, given the offering price and the families' controlling interests.

Thanks to improving sales of jeans and some cost-cutting, Mr. Haas has turned around the fortunes of the $2.5-billion-ayear company, which saw profit fall nearly 75 percent in 1984.

Even industry executives, however, concede that bugs in their systems must be worked out.

Although Pictel says its picture-phone will produce images that will "knock your socks off," telecommunications consultants say quality declines dramatically with transsion speed. Some images are not crisp, they say, and some movement appears as a blur. Analysts say the quality has to be better if picturephones are to succeed.

Equipment prices also remain high. Widcom's picture squeezer costs $50,000, and while it can be shared among a group of employ-ees, each person still needs a Widcom phone and monitor. That alone costs $20,000.

Amid Computer Slump, Olivetti Faces Problems

(Continued from Page 11) does not mean our U.S. situation is that bad," he said, adding that largely because of the agreement with AT&T and a similar marketing deal with Xerox Corp., the United States last year emerged as the company's largest market outside Italy, accounting for about 10 percent of group sales.

But some financial analysts are puzzled about Olivetti's strategy. "It is difficult to figure out which way the company is going, and whether basically it is trying to be in consumer electronics or in the technology business," said John B. Abbink, an analyst with Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. $4,000 in New York. $4,000

Analysts cite the fact that in Japan, Olivetti's sixth-largest foreign market, annual sales have stagnated at about 160 billion lire during the past several years, mainly because of intense competition from Japanese producers and because Olivetti's products were not designed for the Japanese market. In May, Olivetti and Toshiba, which generates one-third of its $11.5 billion in sales from electronics, announced a "strategic alliance," which some industry analysis said would include AT&T.

In the end it did not, and on July 3 the U.S. company announced that it was joining Japanese compa-nies on its own to compete with other companies in the $7-billion Japanese telecommunications market. "Many of us thought that Olivetti would be there with AT&T, and we now are wondering what the Olivetti-AT&T deal really adds up to," said Philip de Marcillac, a London-based analyst with IDC Europa Ltd.

Mr. de Benedetti played down the importance of the Toshiba pact, saying that it was aimed at helping Olivetti increase its credibility and penetration in the Japanese market. That is being achieved through office automation equipment. Several joint projects are being stud-

Conceding that "we have disappointed our shareholders," Mr. Benedetti said that he was hopeful that Docutel's other shareholders, who control 54 percent of the company, will approve a merger agree-ment signed April 30 under which Olivetti will acquire the remaining outstanding shares for $5.50 a share. There currently are about 6,800 shares outstanding. Assuming shareholders approve the plan at a meeting on July 17, Mr. de Benedetti was optimistic that Olivetti would "turn the situation around." He added that he could not be more specific until the plan had been approved.

•In Britain, a decision is expected within about a week on whether the 20-percent shareholding To-shiba has bought in Olivetti's Japa-nese subsidiary, whose $80 million in sales last year were generated by an option to buy the majority. Acorn, Britain's leading micro-computer company specialized in education, needs at least £15 million in fresh financing, and Olivetti is prepared to provide one-third. But Mr. de Benedetti, brushing off tel/Olivetti Corp., a Dallas-based widespread rumors in London that manufacturer of automated cash he intended to pull out of Acom, dispensers in which Olivetti has a said that "similar sacrifices" should 46-percent interest, has reported be made by the company's British increased losses and declining sales creditors, notably AB Electronics, project," he added.

•In Italy, Mr. de Benedetti, despite powerful political opposition. is confident that he will succeed in implementing his agreement to acquire control of a state-owned food company, Societá Meridionale Finanziari SpA. The accord was signed April 29 with Istituto per la Ricostruzione Industriale, Italy's large, government-owned holding company, with the full backing of its chairman, Romano Prodi. He is encouraging privatization of IRI's vast holdings, which include the nation's radio and television network and Alitalia, the national airline. But Mr. Craxi recently overruled Mr. Prodi, stating he was opposed to the plan because the government had not been adequately consulted, and called for new bids, which are currently being evaluated.

Mr. de Benedetti emphasized that he was acting in the SME matter as head of the syndicate of banks and family members, including the Olivetti and his own family, which controls a 22-percent share of Olivetti, and that it was not di-•In France, Olivetti's second-largest market outside Italy, a dis-pute has emerged over a June 19 connection between us and SME." letter that CGE's chairman, said Mr. Piol. THE ASSAULT

By Harry Mulisch. Translated from the Dutch by Claire Nicolas White, 185 pages.

Pantheon Books Inc., 201 East 50th Street. New York, N. Y. 10022.

By John Gross

T IFE is complicated, but a few things seem straightforward enough. One winter night in 1945, a Dutch police inspector called Fake Ploeg is riding home on his bicycle through the outskirts of Haarlem. Much of Europe has been liberated, but the Netherlands is still occupied, and Ploeg is as vicious a collaborator as the country can show, a man infamous for his cruelty. Suddenly, six shots ring out - the Resistance has settled accounts with him. Here is a case of simple justice being done.

But life is complicated, and in no time at all the shooting has begun to have unlooked-for repercussions. Ploeg falls dead outside a house on the quayside — one of a group of four, the home of a sailor called Korteweg and his daughter. Their neighbors, a family called the Steenwijks, peer out of the window, and to their horror they see the Kortewegs dragging the body in front of the Steenwijk house.

the body in front of the Steenwijk house.

Peter, the elder of the Steenwijk sons, thinks they should either return the unwanted gift to the Kortewegs or shift it in front of the house on the other side, which belongs to the Beumers, an inoffensive retired lawyer and his wife. By a perverse logic, he reasons that if Ploeg had been hit a few seconds later, he would be lying outside the Beumers' anyway. When his parents try to stop him, he breaks out of the house, grabs the body by the boots and then hesitates, uncertain in which direction to move it; before he can decide, a detachment of Nazi troops shows up, and he runs off.

After a brutal search, the house is burned down as a reprisal and Mr. and Mrs. Steenwijk are taken away — as it turns out, to their deaths. Peter's younger brother, a 12-year-old called Anton, watches helplessly; then he is driven off to the police station. Subsequently he is released and sent to stay with his uncle and aunt in Amsterdam, but not before he has undergone two more searing experiences. He spends the night in a darkened cell with a member of the Resistance who has been in-jured — she talks to him about her life and her deals in a way he can barely understand; and he sees a middle-aged German soldier who has tried to protect him from being killed when tha convoy in which they are traveling is attacked

This is how "The Assault" opens. The rest of Harry Mulisch's remarkable novel is decorated to unraveling the consequences of that first fateful night. Anton grows up determined to put the past behind him. He becomes a successful anesthesiologist (a symbolic choice of career, but the symbolism is handled lightly). he marries, has a child, remarries, has another child, lives a quiet life, adopts a stance of mildly ironic detachment. But in a series of episodes spaced over 35 years, the experiences that he wants to forget reassert themselves Not only are there pent-up emotions that have to be unlocked and memories that have to be confronted before they can be evercised. There are also nagging riddles. Why did the Kortewegs, decent people, act in the way they did? Even if they were in a panic, what made them choose to endanger the Steenwijks - a family with children, with whom the Korteness daughter, at least, was on friendly terms rather than dumping the body in front of their other neighbors, the Aartses, a childless couple who had always held themselves aloof? What exactly happened to Peter after he disarpeared? There are other puzzles, too, about the original shooting as well as its aftermath. Anton does not actively pursue these questions; on the contrary, most of the time he trues to keep them at bay. But they force themselves on him, piecemeal, and the urge to get at the truth about them is what gives "The Assault" its narrative thrust. At one level the book can be read as a detective story, of the superior Simenon variety, with intriguing twists and turns and a definite solution.

It is also a morality tale (though one that does not point out any easy moral), a dark fable about design and accident, strength and weakness, and the ways in which guilt and innocence can overlap and intermingle. There are multiple ironies in the drama that bindstogether Steenwijks, Kortewegs, Beumers, Aartses, Resistance fighters — and the Ploegs, too (for Fake Ploeg has a son). Tragic ironies, with nothing facile or contrived about them; and ironies, it should perhaps be added, that are never allowed to diminish our sense of the pure evil of the regime against which the initial violence in the story is directed.

For a book to have deeply serious intentions, as this one does, is of course no guarantee of artistic success. But Mulisch also brings exceptional skill and imagination to his task. Town-scapes and interiors are firmly delineated cliché or not, you can hardly help being reminded of the clarity of Dutch painting; characters are established with a deft economy, inthe opening pages, Anton's small-boy reac-tions, the stolid humanism of his father, the adolescent impatience of his brother are all equally convincing, and as the story develops, a hundred small touches sustain the effect of psychological truthfulness. There is a particu-larly strong feeling for the way the past changes as each new layer accrues.

While there is nothing to suggest that "The Assault" is in any way autobiographical, Mulisch's family background has obvious relevance to a story of personal conflict and uncertainty with a wartime setting. He was born in 1927, and though his mother was Jewish - her family was murdered by the Nazis — his father—was jailed for being a collaborator.

Indianapolis: Bigger Games Than Pan Am's

Starters Are Set In All-Star Game

NEW YORK — Tommy Herr of the St. Louis Cardinals has overtaken the Chicago Cubs' Ryne Sandberg in the final vote tabulation to win the starting job at second base for the National League

In the American League, Rickey Henderson of the New York Yankees and Eddie Murray of the Baltimore Orioles surged ahead in the Thursday on that team. (See Scoreboard for the complete voting.)

Herr, leading the major leagues in runs batted in and second in the NL in hitting overcame a nearly 32,000-vote deficit to beat Sandberg by 58,629 ballots in the tightest NL race. He becomes the fourth NL starter at the position in the last four years, following Davey Lopes, Steve Sax and Sandberg. Henderson, the leading hitter in the major leagues, finished second among AL outfielders behind teammate Dave Winfield after pushing past the California Angels' Reggie Jackson. Henderson had been fourth in the balloting a week ago, 15,000 votes short of the top

Boston's Jim Rice got the third starting spot in the AL outfield, just ahead of Jackson, who was bidding for a 12th All-Star start. Rice will be starting in the game for the fourth time, but the first time

Murray made up a 30,000-vote gap to overtake California's Rod Carew at first base. Carew had his streak of 15 straight All-Star starts ended; he had been named every year since 1970, when the balloting was returned to the fans, winning election at second base from 1970-75 and at first from 1976-84.

Graig Nettles, 40, of the San Diego Padres won the NL's third base assignment and will start for the first time for that league, breaking a string of six straight selections for Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt, whom the Phillies switched to first base earlier this year. Nettles was an AL starter in 1975 and a 1980 replacement for the injured George the Detroit Tigers for about $50 million and the Minnesota Twins for about $40 million. In both instances, the sellers walked away with a tidy profit. But the owners say that they cannot continue to absorb losses, and that their figure physicians say that, by 1988, losses will total about $155 million. Much of it has to do with player salaries, which are up to a yearly average of $360,000, not, they can still sell the club and compared with about $45,000 in walk away with a nice bit of black 1975, before free agency. as close as those the season before. It is not, as commonly believed, that the players want more than what they have had in the previous agreement. Essentially, they want the status quo, though even what is considered the status quo, especially with the new $180 million television package, is in dispute.

Foremost, the players want to retain rights to something they never had until 1975, and that is true access to the free marketing of their talents. The end of the reserve clause marked the start of their economic freedom. A compromise on that, they fear, would lead to-erosion of what has been the basis for their higher salaries. The question comes back to the one suggested by Rose. If the owners cannot afford the salaries, how can they continue to pay them? It not, they can still sell the club and

Blessings and Nightmares

By Russell Baker N EW YORK — A lot of the fretting and furning about terrorism is based on the naive belief that it will go away if only a few disagreeable men are disposed of. The Ayatollah Khomeini, Libya's Colonel Qadhafi and Fidel Castro, for example, were listed by President Reagan the other day as men whose absence would make the world a nicer place. For good measure he threw in the Nicaraguan Sandinists, one of his favorite gangs of villains, and the North Koreans, who previously hadn't enjoyed much denunciation from the White House.

Possibly for political reasons, the president didn't mention Northern Ireland's Provisional IRA bombers. India's Sikhs or Central America's rightist death squads.

The net could have been cast even wider by including Italy's Red Brigades, West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang, Spain's Basque na-tionalists. What of South Africa's border raiders, the Philippine insurrectionists and the United States's own madcap bombers and assassins who have succeeded in sealing off so much of Washing-ton's once-public life from the pub-

Far from being the work of a few beastly men, terrorism is a natural product of modern life. Like air pollution, family breakdown, excessively casual sexual promiscuity. traffic paralysis and the exaltation of greed, terrorism is one of the many embarrassing byproducts of Everyone says, for instance, that terrorism flourishes by exploiting the media, by which is meant television. Of course it does. Terrorism gives us melodramas that are irresistible to television audiences. marinated daily in hokum in which screeching engines, gunfire and casual violent death pass for enter-

With television's ability to bring real-life melodrama of this sort im-mediately into parlors around the world, the modern terrorist receives a boon from the miracle of electronics and satellite technology such as his primitive predecessor never dreamed of in the early days seas. It is not surprising that malcontents all over the world who believe they have just causes should spend their lives scheming to get a piece of the camera action.

The inevitable relationship between TV and terrorists now seems to embarrass some of the television news people. During the TWA Beirut hijacking there was a good bit of stewing among them about whether they were being abused by the terrorists or whether they were rightly doing journalism's unpleasant duty.

The silliness of this becomes apparent when you ask the obvious question: Given a competitive news industry in a nation devoted to the principle of maximizing profits, should the kidnapping of Americans by murderous thugs be treated by television as though it were not of much interest?

This would doubtless be the Soviet solution. Such events might get no TV attention whatever in the Soviet Union. Knowing this, terrorists do not devote their talents to abusing the Russians. But do Americans want the news reported by Soviet rules?

Some doubtless do. If you, however, were one of the kidnapped hostages, would you really like to have the news of your predicament held privately by a handful of Washington insiders?

The airplane is another modern miracle without which terrorism could not be so commonplace. Its dramatic speed, permitting terrorists to travel entertainingly immense distances, adds adventurous spice to the televised melodrama So does the ease with which this symbol of wide-ranging freedom can be instantly converted into a tubular metal prison. Then, of course, there is the easy availability of guns, which is so characteristic of the modern age and, in the view of many Americans, absolutely vital to the preservation of democratic freedoms. Arms for the striving masses, airplanes, television — these are blessings of the modern age, and few of us would give them up if we could. Still, we may as well realize that our nightmares are the result of our

Worldwide Telethon for Famine Relief

L IVE AID," the pair of mammoth rock concerts scheduled Saturday in Britain and the United States, may be heard by more than one billion people in an effort that organizers hope will raise $50 million for famine relief work in Africa.

Only 162,000 people will see the concert in person -90,000 in Philadelphia's John F. Kennedy Stadium and 72,000 in London's Wembley Stadium. It begins in England at noon London time -1 P.M. Central European Time (CET), 7 A.M. Philadelphia time (EDT), 8 P.M. Tokyo time - and winds up in Philadelphia 16 hours later. The London concern is 10 hours long and Philadelphia's is 14. Conceived by Bob Geldof. leader of the rock group Boomtown Rats, the concert will feature some of the biggest stars in pop music, performing free.

"We have without a doubt the most important people over the past 25 years in pop music." Geldof said.

Last year Geldof brought together a group of top British recording stars as a group dubbed "Band-Aid" to make the hit record "Do They Know It's Christmas?" for African famine relief. It was the forerunner of "We Are It was the forerunner of "We Are the World," a song composed by alcohol, beer, drugs and weapons chie, by USA for Africa, a similar effort in the United States. Sales of the two groups' records and related merchandise have raised more than $30 million. Organizers hope more than 140 countries will pick up parts of the dual concert on television and radio. The American cable channel MTV is planning to run the whole event. In Britain, BBC radio and TV will carry the London concert and much of the U. S. show.

The use of JFK Stadium is being provided free by Philadelphia Africa, the astronomer Carl Saauthorities. Between acts on the specially built 100-foot, two-tier stage, the crowd will turn to huge television screens around the stadium to watch satellite relays of the London show. The show will go on rain or shine, but so far the only cloud on the horizon comes from a court case: The Westwood Agency of Los Angeles says it has exclusive rights to nine artists, including Tina Turner and Elton John, and is seeking $10 million from the organizers and the ABC-TV network, which plans a three-hour prime-time broadcast combining live relays and tape.

Thousands of police will be mobilized, though more traffic problems than crowd difficulties

Personalities such as former U.S. President Jimmy Carter, Bishop Desmond Tutu of South gan and former vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro will broadcast messages urging peo-ple to make donations, and telephone lines for contributions will be provided. There may also be taped messages from President Ronald Reagan, Pope John Paul II and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain.

Each act is to perform about 10 to 20 minutes. Only Phil Collins will appear on both stages, performing first in London, then flying by Concorde to the United

The Philadelphia tickets at $35 each, with several thousand $50 reserved seats, sold out in less than four hours. The British tick-ets were £25 (about $34) each. The official target of Live Aid is a minimum of $12 million from broadcast rights, corporate sponsorship, ticket sales, telephone contributions and souvenir sales.

Broadcast rights alone will cover the $4-million cost of putting on the concerts. More than 100 U.S. radio stations and 105 television stations have arranged to carry all or most of the Philadelphia concert.

Worldwide Sports and Entertainment Inc., producer of Live Aid, said as many as 350 million ouseholds around the world might tune in to the concerts, which would tie the 1.5-billionperson record viewership for the 1982 World Cup soccer match.

"We broadcast the Olympics and we only used three satellites, said Michael C. Mitchell, president of Worldwide. "For this Money raised from Live Aid will provide shelter, clothing and "long-term solutions" in Africa. Geldof said. Funds from Band Aid and USA for Africa have primarily been used for food and medical supplies so far.

Scenes from smaller concerts in Australia, Japan, the Netherlands and West Germany will be televised in conjunction with the London and Philadelphia shows.

Even a Soviet rock group will join in via satellite from Moscow. Autograph, described as a hard rock group, will be the first Soviet rock musicians seen live by a worldwide television audience, said Brian Bedol, a partner in Dalrymple and Bedol Communications of New York, which will produce the Moscow concert in a television studio before an audience of about 1,000.

The Soviet Union has agreed to take the live satellite feed of the concerts for rebroadcast. China, get videotapes of the concerts Sunday by diplomatic pouch.

The men rested only six days during the race — the first of its kind since 1929. Both said they would be ready to do it again in a few weeks. "I challenged him to a race across America two years ago and it has taken that long to set it up," said Campbell. "I feel ready for another race. I just want to beat him." Skagerberg beat Campbell in a six-day race in 1982, and Campbell has been plotting revenge ever since. The two averaged 40 miles a day during the "1985 Lou Gehrig Race For Life," coordinated by the National ALS Foundation Inc. The effort has raised $500,000 for research into the progressive ailment known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

When Tony Bennett testified on Capitol Hill, he did it the way he knows best: He sang a couple of songs. Bennett went before the House Banking Committee's coinage panel to promote passage of a congressional resolution that would award congressional gold medals to the American songwriting team George and Ira Gershwin. After Bennett sang the Gershwing numbers "Our Love Is Here to Stay" and "Who's Got the Last Laugh Now," the subcommittee passed the resolution unanimously, forwarding it to the full Banking Committee.
